I've carried in the wood, cleaned the house for me, fixed the hole in the corn, swept the front porch, dug a path to the middle house, and fixed the rain. I've been good to the end and I've washed my face and cleaned my finger nails. My foot are dry and I've got a handkerchief, and I've come to you now, mother dear, to see if you thought you couldn't persuade me to let me with the one this winter. Minneapolis Tribune.
